

So you applied for your first job, and you got an interview! Sweet!

But uh... how do you actually act in a job interview? Welcome back to FLOW LIFE SKILLZ!

We've already talked about how to dress for an interview, but how d'you act?

VERY FANCY + PROFESSIONAL BLAZER

Like, you don't wanna dap the interviewer up or anything like that...

VERY FANCY + PROFESSIONAL VANS

Well, first of all, before you go for the actual interview, it's good to look over basic interview questions online to sort of figure out what you'll say.

"What's your greatest strength?" and all that junk.

It may sound
dorky, but it's cool to really
hype yourself
up a little.
You got this,
man! It's just
a conversation.
You can do
this!!

When you get there, confidently introduce yourself with a crisp handshake.

You don't have to talk
too fancy or whatever,
but I wouldn't call
your interviewer "Bruh"
or anything. Adults
are weird about that crap.

(I am definitely
not speaking
from experience.
At all.)

It's important to be put together & confident, but
mostly you just wanna be yourself.

Because at the end of the day, if they say you aren't a good fit for them, then they may not be a good fit for you either.
