

Hey, long time no see! Welcome back to FLOW LIFE SKILLZ!!

Today we're talking about
how to organize
ANYTHING!

Yup, you
heard me!!

flow

First, you wanna generally survey the area you're organizing, and see if you need to get rid of anything.

Is part of the reason your closet is overflowing that you have too much junk?

Time to get rid of some of it!

This is the part
that might actually
take the longest.

Go ITEM BY ITEM
(seriously)!

Decide what is worth keeping and
what isn't,
and throw
anything
that isn't trash into a bag.

Hang onto that, you
can donate it
later.

One man's trash is
another man's treasure
and all that.

Then, you want to think of how you want to categorize everything left.

T-SHIRTS

PANTS

CHONIES

So, for the closet, do you separate by type of item or by how often you wear it?

You can really go nuts with this if you want.

Like, all my pants are separated from shorts, and then they're color coordinated.

Now, all that's left to do is step back and admire your work.

Do your best to keep your system up, but if you find the mess creeping back in, you can always start the process all over.

I know organizing can be annoying, but if you power through it can actually be pretty painless, honest!
