

You know that gut feeling you can get that a situation is just...wrong?

flow

In the pit of your stomach, whispered in the back of
your mind.

Like a "spidey-sense."

It's seemingly for no reason, so you wave it off. "It's fine, I'm just being paranoid, whatever."

And then
you end

up

paying for it.

Your "spidey-sense" may not always be 100% right, but it's an important tool to pay attention to.

It's like the rudder of a boat, steering you in the right direction, to protect you and guide you.

So don't write it off right away. Listen.
Pay attention. There might be wisdom
in the caution.
